Surveillance video: Elizabeth Smart in Utah County

By ROB ROXBURGH

SPRINGVILLE — Tuesday morning, it was like any other for Ryan Johnson, a Springville McDonald's regular. He stepped in line and casually ate his breakfast before taking a seat at a table. A bearded man and two women, their faces veiled, their hands lying in a heap at their feet, approached him. Johnson left the restaurant to return to work. He had to leave the parking lot. The bearded man asked him for a ride to the nearest bus station. Johnson took him to a nearby stop and handed him $5 to purchase bus fare to Salt Lake City. Hours later and after several hours of searching, the three individuals were discovered near 10200 South and State. Elizabeth Smart and her alleged abductors, David Mitchell and Wanda Barzee, were identified.

"Elizabeth Smart was in my car this morning," Johnson said Wednesday. "I'm watching it on TV and I still can't believe it."

Alejandra Ortega, a McDonald's manager at 1455 N. Main in Springville, remembers serving the trio at about 9:30 a.m. She said she had no idea that one of the women was Elizabeth Smart.

"She was wearing a white veil," Ortega said.

Ortega said Smart was also wearing a gray wig and sunglasses.

"I'm like, 'why's she wearing sunglasses inside?'" Ortega said.

Ortega said Smart never talked or said anything when the trio approached the counter. The women then left, leaving Mitchell alone.

"He said, 'I want to order but I have my wife and daughter with me. They're in the restroom,'" Ortega said.

Ortega said Mitchell waited for about a minute. That's when the two women came out of the restroom.

Angel placed on temple

By CHRISTINE PATTERSON

REDLANDS, Calif. — Despite efforts to keep the event secret, about 200 people discovered that the angel Moroni was to be placed on the Redlands, California Temple, and turned out to watch.

Church officials did not publicize the event in an effort to keep crowds to a minimum, protesters at a distance, and neighbors happy.

Those who attended felt privileged and watched as cranes lifted the statue and placed it on top of the nearly completed temple.

"My heart skipped a beat," said Sister Mary Margaret, a full-time missionary serving with her husband in employment services. "This is very exciting. I thought, 'What have I done to have the privilege to see the angel put on the temple?' He will be there until the second coming."

Construction workers pulled the gold plated statue from a crate and inspected it in detail for any flaws, according to Dixie Patterson, a member of the Redlands, California Stake who witnessed the event.

Patterson said the workers attached an 8-foot pole to the bottom of the statue, which anchored it to the tower it stands on.

"It was really overwhelming," Patterson said, fighting back tears. "We got close enough that when they pulled it out of the crate, you could really see it. I've never seen one so close before."

The temple is scheduled to be completed at the end of the summer.

Police blocked off the road in front of the temple and those who watched parked their cars and walked to the site, cameras in hand.

"It was a gorgeous day," Patterson said. "We waited all day because we didn't know exactly when it would happen."

Salt Lake Police looking for more clues

By STACEY REED and CHRISTINE PATTERSON

SALT LAKE CITY — Even though Elizabeth is home, family members and police officials pleaded with the community Thursday to come forward with any clues or tips they may have regarding Elizabeth or her abductors in the last nine months.

"This is still an ongoing investigation," said Chief Rick Dinse of the Salt Lake City Police Department. "The law enforcement community as a whole is following up on a large number of leads, but we will continue to urge members of the community to call with any information regarding this case."

Dinse did conclude that Elizabeth was taken from her home at knife point, taken to the hills behind her home and was there for approximately two months, traveled to San Diego by bus and had been there until recently.

Hundreds of the volunteers who searched the mountains behind the Smart's home in the first days after the abduction were within yards of Elizabeth and Mitchell, said Chris Smart, Elizabeth's uncle.

"She said she heard her uncle David's voice calling her," Chris Smart said.

Elizabeth's aunt, Ingrid Smart, said Elizabeth told them she couldn't speak.

"She didn't say anything further and we didn't ask her," Ingrid Smart said.

Dinse said Brian David Mitchell and Wanda Ilene Barzee are being held for aggravated kidnapping charges but no official charges have been filed yet. He said those charges will come in the near future.

Chip Burrus, special agent of the FBI said, "U.S. Attorney Paul Warner is taking a very strong aggressive stand in that matter and we intend to fully provide him with a case that will allow him to move forward with the prosecution."

Ed Smart, Elizabeth's father, declined to answer questions about whether Elizabeth ever tried to escape or let anyone around her know she had been kidnapped.

However, Ed Smart and officials said they have no doubt that she was under some kind of brainwashing.

"There is clearly a psychological impact that occurred during this abduction at some point," Dinse said. "We aren't going to go into that, but there's no question that she was psychologically affected by the connections in this group."

According to Dinse, Emmanuel had familiarized himself with the Smart's home more times than when he worked on it.

"We got the pieces of the puzzle now," Burrus said. "We know what it looks like, we're putting

BYU awarded A-plus for campus safety and security

By CARRIE SHEFFIELD

Students at BYU can rest assured that their campus safety and security are among the best in the country.

While BYU's academics are good, the diversity needs work, according to a College Prowler, a Pittsburgh-based company that publishes report cards for U.S. colleges and universities based on student College Prowler publishes the grades, along with student testimonials, in the form of a guidebook available for $5.95 on the company's website.

BYU got the nation's best grade, an A-plus, in controlling the drug scene, and ranked high with an A-minus for its facilities and athletics. In ranking, BYU got a C grade, and a D-plus in campus strictness, tying with place with George Washington University.

Mike Skurman, 22, founded College Prowler because he felt current rankings and guidebooks failed to give an inside look at college life from students instead of stale numbers and outsider's observations.

"There are no adults involved in the process at all," Skurman said. "We pride ourselves on how we allow students to speak for themselves."

The company receives orders for guidebooks from college admission staff members, high school guidance counselors and publishers.

Skurman said College Prowler gathers input from students via voluntary e-mail surveys given out to 200-300 students, with a 10-15 percent response rate. Employees then call random students to ask them if their school is portrayed accurately.

Carri Jenkins, assistant to the president for University Communications, said she doubts the sample size is enough to paint an accurate portrait of BYU.

"I would say that is not a fair representation of BYU," Jenkins said. "It sounds like this is just opinion, that they didn't ask for any data here, any physical evidence. I would not call this a statistically significant survey."

Skurman admits the other guidebooks are not perfect, but said overall College Prowler is able to capture the feel of a campus.

"We definitely don't know everything about BYU, but I think we do a pretty good job," Skurman said.

He also said College Prowler is better than guidebook companies which he said base its assessment on old data.

Police security forces investigate at the site of a bomb blast on a commuter train in Bombay Thursday. Ten people were killed and 65 wounded after a bomb ripped through a commuter train in India's financial capital.

Bomb explodes in Bombay train, kills at least 10

BOMBAY, India (AP) — A bomb exploded on a passenger train Thursday at a station in Bombay, India's financial hub, killing at least 10 people and wounding 65.

Eight of those killed were women, as the explosive went off between the women's first-class compartment and the general compartment, senior government official Utal Mukhopadhyay said.

Bombay Police Commissioner Ranjit Sharma said 15 of those injured were in serious condition. "There seems to be the hand of a terrorist group," Sharma told reporters. There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

The blast blew off part of the roof of the train car, causing panic in the station crowded with commuters heading home after work.

One witness, Pratiksha Naik, reached the scene a few minutes after the blast. "I saw police helping passengers smeared in blood out of the train," Naik said by telephone.

Security was tightened in the city on India's west coast and surveillance increased in public places. Security was also put on alert at the Parliament building in New Delhi and other landmarks in the capital.

Islamic hardline groups have carried out at least two crude bomb attacks in the past four months in Bombay, located on India's western coast, police said. Thursday's blast was bigger than those, said Mukhopadhyay.

Officials said that a security alert was raised at railroad stations across India.

FBI charges chief executive

NEW YORK (AP) — The chief executive of technology company Computer Horizons Corp. surrendered to the FBI on Thursday on charges he made more than $150,000 through insider trading.

John J. Cassese, 56, was released on a $500,000 bail.

Cassese is accused of buying 15,000 shares of Data Processing Resources Corp. in 1999, the day before it approved an acquisition by Compuware Corp. He bought the stock at about $13.25 a share, and it shot up to $23.50 after the deal was announced, prosecutors said.

Prosecutors said Cassese learned of the impending acquisition when Compuware's chief executive called him to inform him Compuware was abandoning its bid to acquire Computer Horizons.

Cassese was indicted on fraud and insider trading charges.

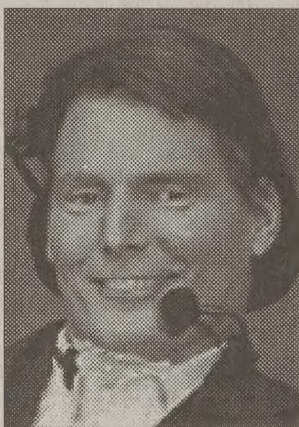

Electrodes may help Reeve

CLEVELAND (AP) — Doctors have implanted electrodes in Christopher Reeve's diaphragm in an experiment they hope will allow the paralyzed actor to breathe without a respirator, hospital officials said Thursday.

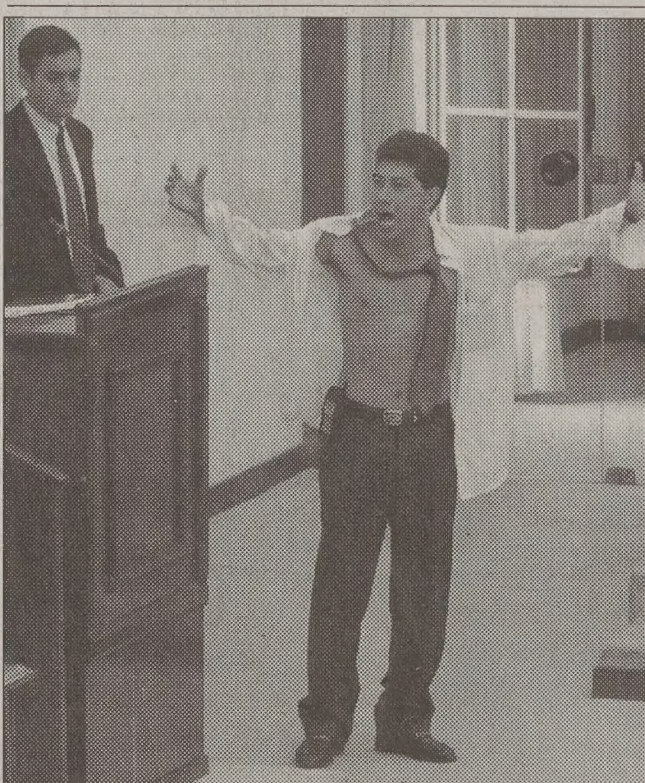

Reeve, 50, has needed help breathing since he broke his neck in a horseback riding accident eight years ago.

The actor, best known as star of the "Superman" movies, can now breathe for more than two hours without the respirator, compared with 10 minutes before the surgery.

The assistance of the electrodes eventually might strengthen his diaphragm muscles enough to allow Reeve to breathe on his own, said Dr. John McDonald, who has helped design the actor's treatment.

came forward with information about Emmanuel.

"He was wearing white muslin clothes," Angela Smart said. "He said he preached the word of Christ, and he had these big beautiful eyes."

She said the man was with a woman who she knows was not Elizabeth.

"He asked me for money," she said. "I tried to talk to him, I stepped right in front of him and asked him why he wanted the money, and he turned away from me."

Angela Smart said when she got home, she told her family what a weird encounter she had had and that it really had bothered her.

"I didn't know if it was because of guilt for not giving him something, but I had horrible feelings," she said.

Ed Smart said Elizabeth was unaware of the large number of people looking for her. She had seen a few posters and had heard about a harp concert in her honor.

"We showed her the volumes of e-mail that had been sent about her and she was surprised and overwhelmed," Ed Smart said.

"As we came to the Transit Center, they wanted to get off and transfer there for the number 811 to Sandy," Souther said. "I told them to stay on and they could transfer at UVSC."

When the bus arrived at UVSC, Souther and Mitchell continued to talk for another 10 minutes.

"I asked if the girl was his daughter, and he said yes," Souther said. "A few minutes later he shook hands with me and told me his name was Peter. He introduced his wife, and his daughter, Juliet."

Souther said "Juliet" had on the same gray wig and sunglasses that Ortega had noticed at the restaurant.

"In my mind I didn't think it was his daughter," Souther said. "I asked him why his daughter was wearing a wig, and he got really angry."

Souther said he felt uncomfortable after that and excused himself to go to the restroom.

"I walked up some stairs and down a sidewalk to overlook the bus stop, but they were gone even though their bus was still 10 minutes away," Souther said.

Souther said he then found a police officer and told him that he thought he had seen the man wanted in the Elizabeth Smart case. The officer said he would look into it and pass the information on to the Sandy police where they were headed.

It wasn't until later that Souther's suspicions were confirmed with reports of Smart's safe return. Souther said he felt guilty for not calling 911.

"I feel that God placed me in a place, and I failed to do everything possible," Souther said. "I just feel if I could turn back the clock, I would have worked harder to stop them and save Elizabeth."

Ortega didn't make the connection until she saw the news later that day.

"I was shocked because I was right there in front of her," Ortega said. "I was wondering why she didn't say anything, why she didn't yell for help. I'm still in shock. I could have done something, but I didn't recognize her."

Lawmakers fight alcohol use

New wholesale beer taxes concern Utah beer sellers

By ZACHARY WEST

The Utah Legislature's decision to increase wholesale beer tax last week has beer sellers concerned that they are continuing to be taxed unfairly.

Last week, the Utah State Senate passed a pair of bills to modify laws governing alcoholic beverage sales and increased the tax on wholesale beer. Legislators passed the bill hoping to use the revenue from increased license fees to combat over consumption and underage drinking.

Currently, a barrel of beer costs bars about $11. Effective May 1, the total price will be $12.80. Those who purchase beer by the can will see a four-cent increase per six-pack.

Sen. Majority Leader Michael Waddoups, R-Salt Lake, said the reason for the tax increase is the decrease in funds given to local cities and counties for DUI enforcement. The last time money was allocated to cities and counties for DUI enforcement was 1983. The amount for cities and counties was set at $4.325 million.

Waddoups said last year, in balancing the budget, the state took all of the funds and left no money for the cities and counties to battle DUI.

"I tried very hard to get the lost money restored to them, and I couldn't do it," he said. "My colleagues said they needed the money, so I introduced a bill because I believe strongly in DUI enforcement."

Jose Miranda, assistant manager for the Durango Bar in Salt Lake City, said he is not bothered by the increase because the bar will keep its business open whether legislators continue to raise taxes. "We'll just have to sell more beer," he said. "Ultimately, the customers will pay for the tax increase anyway."

Bob Brown, owner of the bar Cheers to You in Salt Lake, said, "We're one of the highest taxed states in the country," he said. "Utah's tax is four times the national average. That's a ridiculous amount of tax."

"They discriminate against 'the sinners' in this state, and there isn't much I can do about that," he said.

In response to the bar owners' comments, Waddoups said, "My kids are worth more than a four-cent per six pack tax increase, and so are everyone else's."

Utah legislators relax some laws, increase penalties for abuse

By DAVID GALE

Simplified Utah liquor laws have made getting a drink easier but have increased penalties for abuse.

The Utah Legislature made sweeping changes to Utah's liquor laws during the 2003 session.

Under newly approved guidelines, restrictions on where alcohol can be served have been relaxed.

Utah clubs are also now permitted to advertise on billboards and explain what club memberships are and how they work.

While alcohol will be more accessible to legal drinkers, access to private clubs will now be completely restricted for minors.

This could affect minors accustomed to attending concerts at area clubs and clubs catering to special events, such as weddings, where alcohol is normally served with minors present.

Rewriting liquor laws will not have much effect on alcohol availability for Utah teens.

"If you ask students about the difficulty of getting alcohol and drugs, those who want them can still get them," said Stephen Bahr, BYU sociology professor. "It won't change much."

Bahr worked on a 1997 study commissioned by Utah to study drug use among students statewide.

In the study, Bahr found that alcohol consumption has stayed constant in the state for the past 10 years, although marijuana use has risen slightly.

Cigarette use among teens has declined over the years, Bahr said, and has a much more negative image among today's teens.

Binge drinking remains a problem and is not likely to change, according to Bahr.

"Kids do it because it's a way of hanging out and feeling part of the crowd," he said. "It's done to gain social acceptance."

Study: Half of U.S. alcohol sales go to teens, excessive drinkers

By DAVID GALE

Teens and excessive drinkers account for more than half of the alcohol sales in the United States, according to a study published last week in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The study, conducted by the Columbia University Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse, found that underage drinkers accounted for $22.5 billion, or nearly 20 percent, of all alcohol sales in 1999.

Heavy drinkers spent $34.4 billion on alcohol, making up 30 percent of total sales, the study also reported.

The National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, along with the U.S. Departments of Health and Human Services and Agriculture, defined heavy drinking as more than two drinks a day.

The Columbia Study concluded that excessive drinkers and teens accounted for nearly half of the $116.2 billion spent on alcohol in one year.

"Our research has consistently shown that alcohol is a major contributing factor in the three leading causes of teen death: accidents, homicide and suicide," said Ellen Ross, communications director for the center.

Former U.S. Surgeons General from the Carter, Bush, Clinton and W. Bush presidencies, as well as former First Lady Betty Ford, issued a joint statement accompanying the release of the study.

They urged the alcohol industry to form a partnership with the public health community to curb underage and excessive drinking.

They also encouraged parents to take a more active role in their children's lives and to work to curb alcohol use.

Lisa Hawkins, member of the Distilled Spirits Council, issued a statement calling Columbia's latest research "sloppy and manipulative."

A similar Columbia University study, released one year ago, mistakenly claimed that teenagers accounted for 25 percent of U.S. alcohol consumption, a point the alcoholic beverage industry emphasized when disputing the latest study.

However, the Columbia study is not alone in emphasizing risky behavior among teens.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's 2001 study on Youth Risky Behavior showed that more than 78 percent of students had consumed alcohol during their lifetime, and nearly half had had an alcoholic drink in the past 30 days.

Nearly 30 percent of all high school students participated in heavy or binge drinking in the month preceding the CDC survey.

Of the students surveyed by the CDC, 13.3 percent had driven drunk within the last 30 days.

Student Honor Association placed a booth in the quad Thursday to encourage students to obey the Honor Code's residential living standards.

Friendly reminder promotes standards

By SARA JANE RICHARDSON

"Get your buns out in time" is a friendly reminder to BYU students. The Student Honor Association is finishing a weeklong campaign to remind students to keep the Honor Code and residential standards.

The Honor Code Office has been getting a lot of calls recently about people of the opposite sex in the bedrooms," said SHA volunteer, Kurt Kirkham, 22, a senior from Gainsbury, Texas, who is getting in information systems. "Students shouldn't do that because it leads to trouble."

The student organization traditionally hosts events year-round to encourage students to abide by the Honor Code. This year, they received a special grant to hold campaigns about maintaining residential living standards, Kirkham said.

SHA volunteers spent Thursday afternoon handing students balloons with the slogan "don't burn, burn," and magnets with the slogan "10 ways to get a person out before curfew." Today it's all about promoting the Honor Code," said Allison Lloyd, a sophomore, majoring in business leadership and a SHA volunteer. "Stay as far away from the line as possible."

Students with roommates or friends who do violate the residential living standards on campus are faced with a dilemma.

"I've seen occasions where people in my house have broken the Honor Code and gone into bedrooms of the opposite sex," said Joseph Lowry, 23, a senior from Gainesville, Fla., majoring in international politics. "I think that the Honor Code should be self-regulated though. I don't think we need people policing around."

Today's theme is students disciplining themselves to obey the Honor Code, said SHA employee, Ruth Cuervas, 22, a senior from Santa Monica, Calif., majoring in public relations.

"We know the residential living standards are very important guidelines that have been set to keep us safe," she said. "We are encouraging students to abide by the Honor Code and enjoy the blessings."

Because of the success of the campaign, the Student Honor Association will now hold this weeklong event every semester, Cuervas said.

Today SHA volunteers will be handing out free Cinnabons in the quad from noon to 2 p.m., along with a friendly reminder to keep curfew. Singers and a step dance group will perform in the Wilkinson Center Terrace.

Freshman's future full of possibility

By JESSICA POE

In third grade, when people asked Katie Doshier what she wanted to be when she grew up, she enthusiastically announced her plans to be a famous singer.

This week, Doshier finished recording a song for a religious album, and now she's no longer sure what she wants to be when she grows up.

A distribution company for church music recently sponsored a talent search and selected Doshier, a freshman from Central Point, Ore., to sing "Once We Lived in Heaven" on an upcoming album, "Sunday Sampler."

The song is about eternal families, one of Doshier's long-term goals.

Doshier participated in the talent search with her father, who wrote the song and played guitar.

"I was nervous because I had to sound good and make my dad's song sound good," Doshier said.

Though the accomplishment is exciting, she decided she no longer wants to be a famous singer.

"You have to deal with too many things when you're famous, and it is not worth the trouble," Doshier said.

Now that she's decided against fame, Doshier's list of possibilities is endless.

"I have so many interests, I'm trying to compile them into a focus," Doshier said.

Doshier lives in a cramped dorm room. She tries to balance her time among her studies, social life and sleep.

And like many freshmen, she's searching for a major.

"I'm keeping my eyes open and looking at all kinds of majors, anything from gynecology to aerobic instruction to biology or music," Doshier said, smiling. "That's really broad, isn't it? But I am going to find it."

Doshier's prospects for future careers expanded because of the options available at college, said her older sister, Becki Doshier, a sophomore from Central Point, Ore., studying pre-theatre arts.

EVERYBODY HAS A STORY

This is part of a regular Friday series featuring the people at BYU. Each week, a reporter will find the story of a person on campus. Next week it could be you.

"She's always been open to a lot of subjects, but she is kind of looking at everything—even the abnormal," Becki Doshier said.

Looking at everything the world has to offer takes a lot of energy and character, said Britany Palmer, Katie Doshier's roommate, a freshman from Seattle.

Most freshmen leave family and friends when coming to college, which gives them a chance to become their own person, Palmer said.

"I'm starting to define who I am," Katie Doshier said.

Whatever she decides to do in the future, music will be a part of her life, Doshier said.

"I love music because it says things that you could say in no other way," Doshier said.

Endorsements due Saturday

Ecclesiastical Endorsements are due Saturday, and the Honor Code Office is busy processing them.

If students don't get their ecclesiastical endorsements in by March 15, it makes it difficult for the Honor Code Office to process the endorsements by the first day to register for classes.

"This is a great school that is founded on gospel principles," said Steve Baker, director of the Honor Code Office. "The students make BYU a great university. In order to have the great place that we have, it takes a commitment to high standards."

UVSC students conduct superhero search

Creative costumes, unique powers sought

By JESSICA POE

Superman, Batman and Robin, Spiderman, Dick Tracy and Wonder Woman all stand as classic heroes, but in the modern world of chaos, new crime-fighting role models are needed.

A contest searching for superheroes will happen at UVSC, today at 5 p.m. in the Student Center on Center Stage. Admission is free.

"We feel we need some people to fight crime and to represent good in all things," said Brandon Walker, a director of the contest and a UVSC senior from El Dorado Hills, Calif., studying multimedia communications and technology.

With road rage, high school football game fights and general ignorance common in the world, it's easy to see why superheroes are vital, Walker said.

"We're going to choose who has the best super power and their ability and desire to fight crime," Walker said.

Applicants should come to the contest in their most impressive superhero ensemble and be prepared to speak about their unique super power.

"I'd stress the outfit — that's really important — and definitely creativity," said Mark Harper, a director of the contest and a UVSC senior from Orem, studying multi-media communications and technology.

Jeremy Field (left), 24, a BYU senior from Boise, Idaho, majoring in political science, and others will participate in today's superhero search contest at UVSC. Field's superhero name is "The Smoocher."

The tryouts are a preliminary part of a class assignment, and the film footage of the event will be used in the class, Harper said.

He said his personal super power comes from bumps on the back of his arm that help him read quickly.

"I haven't thought of an application for my bumps, but I'm sure there is a way it can fight crime," Harper said.

Harper and Walker got the idea from the movie "Mystery Men," a spoof of aspiring superheroes attempting to save their city.

"We loved the movie, and we think it'll be fun to see what all is out there," Harper said.

This contest is open to anyone who wants to take care of Utah Valley, but Walker said he encourages people everywhere to start their own crime-fighting teams.

"We need to help make this world a better place," Walker said.

The winners of the contest will create a united superhero team, Walker said.

"We're looking for people that have a positive attitude toward the crime-fighting scene and are willing to rise above the mediocre and put their powers to the test," Harper said.

Participants preparing for the contest take training seriously.

"I've been in some intense training for quite some time now. It involves Chapstick," said Jeremy Field, a BYU senior from Boise, Idaho, studying political science, who will be a contestant.

Field, otherwise known as "The Smoocher," is irresistible to women.

"What happens is, when I kiss them, I suck the evil out of them," Field said.

Field said he is looking for a superhero sidekick or bodyguard to protect him from crazed women.

Intercollegiate Knights push service, tradition

By ANDREW WATSON

The BYU chapter of the Intercollegiate Knights serves students and the community while on a crusade to keep campus tradition alive.

"Service, sacrifice and loyalty is our motto," said "The Honorable Duke" Vonn Christensen, the Knight's president and a math major from Porterville, Calif.

With 25 members, the Intercollegiate Knights of BYU are constantly involved with service projects on campus and in the community. They have sponsored book drives, assembled Christmas packages for military servicemen and women overseas, visited disability homes during holidays, made and distributed quilts for the poor and worked with LDS Humanitarian Aid Services to assemble hygiene kits for schools in poor parts of the world.

"I'm somewhat biased, but I think the Intercollegiate Knights is one of the best organizations at BYU," said "Horrible Executioner" Peter Brown, the parliamentarian and tradition officer and a physics and astronomy major from Friendsville, Texas. "It has been a great year to stay involved and serve our alma mater," he said.

Among the activities they organizes, the service-search organization plan a yearly "Egg Hunt Extravaganza" egg hunt for children of students and faculty. Christensen said about 300 people attend each year. This year's hunt is scheduled to take place April 12.

The knights are also in charge of upholding BYU traditions many students take for granted.

"Not only are we involved in many service projects, but we have a very rich heritage of upholding BYU traditions," Brown said. "We are in charge of lighting the Y for homecoming and graduation as well as ringing the victory bell after home football and basketball victories."

Developing new traditions is another part of doing your duty as an Intercollegiate Knight.

The BYU Knights meet 7:30 p.m. every Tuesday in TNRB.

Professor urges marriage preparation

By ERICA STARR

"When should a couple get married?" was the topic Thursday of the relationship series presentation sponsored by Women's Services.

"Our society values marriage, but it doesn't value preparing for marriage," said Jeff Larson, a professor of marriage, family and human development. "I have 25 predictors of whether students will be happy or not in their marriages. Students should be thoughtful and courageous enough to talk with their partners and dig into each other's information."

Larson said most couples think all they need to know is that they're in love and that they can't wait to see each other again. However, he said, that is why there is a 40 percent divorce rate in the United States. Larson emphasized that during his research with premarital predictors, he found a theory suggesting relationships develop at a number of levels.

"Before couples get married they need to ask these questions together: What predicts happiness in marriage? How do I assess it?" Larson said. "Then couples need to compare themselves and their answers of these questions and set goals for improvement before they get married, not after they get married."

The predictors Larson has established are grouped in three categories: context and environment, couple traits and individual traits.

Larson suggested couples need to look at their emotional, physical and cognitive present state before preparing for marriage. Larson listed individual traits that, if extremely high, can hinder happiness in marriage. These traits included anxiety, depression, impulsivity, self-consciousness, vulnerability to stress, anger and hostility and dysfunctional beliefs.

"It is important to note that all people possess neurotic traits," Larson said. "It's part of the human condition. We are talking about people who are extremes.

Even then, nearly all of these can be changed, improved and dealt with before marriage through medication, your bishop or counseling."

Couples should then evaluate couple traits before considering marriage, he said. These include similarities, length of acquaintances, premarital sex or pregnancy, cohabitation, communication skills, conflict resolution and skills or style. Larson said these traits are good predictors for experts to determine if a marriage will last.

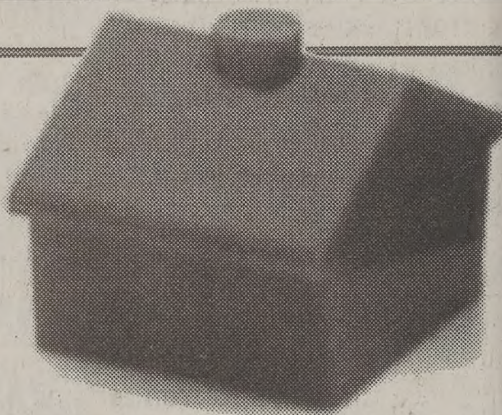

"Dissimilarity can add stressors to the relationship, as well as premarital issues and cohabitation," Larson said. "Any one who says they need to live with someone before they get married should be told that it won't help them to be any more happy. These kinds of people have difficulty with commitment and tend to be liberal with their views of relationships."

Communication skills or resolution skills are all skills that people can develop, Larson said. MFHD 302 is a class that addresses these issues for engaged students.

Art to make you think

By MICHAEL LAVERTY

Part of a weekly spotlight featuring a piece of art located in the BYU Museum of Art.

"One Nation Under God: Sub divisional" is a quilted artwork by Lane Twitchell, a native of Provo, Utah, who constructed the artwork in 2001 and sold it to the museum shortly after. The artwork suggests the nation has been built up of subdivisions, Twitchell said. "Even now, highways and homes stubbornly cling to their natural habitats and wilderness," he said. "But each contemporary piece is created by unique artist perspective and viewers can relate to its sense of community and place."

"The visions of 19th century expansionists have been realized," he said. Despite not being proficient in art interpretation, students think Twitchell's art is interesting. Hixson related the art to school policy. "I think all of the yellow triangles remind me of the lack of Y-lot parking," she said. "The green surrounding the yellow are all of the parking tickets taking over the lots, and the disorganized shapes resemble the whole student parking situation." Katherine Rochelle, 19, a sophomore from Kingsport, Tenn., majoring in chemical engineering, interpreted Twitchell's art in a different way. "This looks like a map of a computer chip," said Rochelle. "That, or a technologically enhanced Easter egg." Herman Dutoit, manager of audience education and development, said the museum is aiming to build a stronger program of contemporary artist's work. "Art like 'One Nation Under God: Sub divisional' is non-conventional. It doesn't fit easily into traditional categories of art we are accustomed to," he said. "But each contemporary piece is created by unique artist perspective and viewers can relate to its sense of community and place."

Exploring 'The Road Home'

By ROB ROXBURGH

For some it requires physical travel. For others it is a purely spiritual journey.

The BYU Men's Chorus will uplift weary travelers as they sing selections from their new CD "The Road Home."

The 185-member choir will perform a preview concert of the CD at 7:30 tonight and Saturday in the de Jong Concert Hall. Tickets are $9 and $3 off with a student ID.

The CD is a compilation of songs sung by the Men's Chorus and the three other auditioned BYU choirs.

Samuel Glanzer, a junior from Spokane, Wash., majoring in American studies, is vice president of the Men's Chorus.

"At the end of each year we make a CD of all of the songs that we sing, and then we sell it to the choir members themselves," Glanzer said. "It's not but every five or seven years that there's an actual CD that is sold to the public."

Glanzer said most of the songs on the CD are about home either literally or figuratively. He said many of the songs refer to a spiritual home.

"We really feel like the Men's Chorus serves as a missionary opportunity and that we have the ability to touch the lives of the people in the audiences," Glanzer said.

Glanzer said one of his favorite songs the choir will sing is a piece called "Pilgrims' Song."

"One of the lines in it says 'my soul doth long to go where I may fully know the glory of my Savior,'" Glanzer said. "The idea that home is with the Savior is very touching and can be powerful."

When the choir sang this piece in a Salt Lake performance, the audience was asked to stand and participate. Glanzer said it is a unique opportunity for the audience to participate and feel the spirit of the music.

The BYU Men's Chorus will perform selections from its new CD, "The Road Home," in the de Jong Concert Hall tonight and Saturday night.

"We ended and it was just silent," Glanzer said. "It meant more to the choir members than a standing ovation."

Glanzer said proceeds from the CD sales will help fund tours or other community service projects the BYU choirs take part in.

These service projects include providing a free concert to local high school students and traveling to the prison to sing for the detained youth.

"It's exciting to be able to go out and serve," Glanzer said.

The CD will be released at the end of the next school year.

"It has been a challenging year, but the rewards that come from the challenge exceed the difficulty," Glanzer said.

The choir meets every day from 4 to 5 p.m., but Glanzer said when an extra effort is needed the men are always willing.

"I credit the men in the Men's Chorus for working as hard as they do," Glanzer said. "The commitment that the men have is phenomenal."

The Men's Chorus was founded in 1958 and has become the largest collegiate male choral organization in the United States.

"LDS people are a singing community," Men's Chorus conductor Rosalind Hall said. "Our children learn to sing very young in primary."

Over 400 students audition for the all-male ensemble each year.

"In an LDS community there is no stigma connected with men singing," Hall said. "In many other communities, men are encouraged to do sports; sports is the big thing. Singing has a bit of a stigma that it's sort of weak or unmanly to sing. I don't think that exists in an LDS community."

Springville resident dies in Provo car crash

By REED PARKER LARSEN

Stacie Allan, a 24-year-old Springville resident, died Thursday in a two-car accident on South State Street in Provo.

Firefighters used extraction equipment to free Allan, who was taken to Utah Valley Regional Medical Center and pronounced dead at 9:11 a.m., nearly an hour after the accident.

The accident tied up traffic for over two hours Thursday morning.

Southbound State Street traffic was closed and northbound traffic was reduced to only one lane for two hours, as police and firefighters tried to clean up the wreck and finish their investigation.

Cody Wall, 29, from Provo, was driving the white Chevrolet truck that collided with Allan's car.

Wall suffered cuts to his head and chest injuries. He was transported to UVRMC.

Allan was traveling northbound in a 1992 blue Honda Accord on State Street when she lost control of her vehicle, crossed over the median and hit the Chevrolet truck traveling southbound, according to witnesses.

nesses.

Allan was attempting a high-speed pass in the left lane of the northbound lanes, a Provo firefighter said. She was not wearing a seat belt, according to witnesses and firefighters.

The Provo Fire Department arrived on the scene quickly, said Tiffany Harward, 24, from Salem, who witnessed the accident.

"It was 18 minutes from the time of our arrival to the scene, extracting the female from the vehicle, and loading her into the ambulance," a Provo firefighter said.

"We would have liked to have done it in 10 minutes, but the damage to the car was too great," he said.

BYU student Kyle Dunn witnessed the accident from the window of the animal shelter where he works.

"I saw people helping immediately," said Dunn, 25, a senior from Grand Junction, Colo., majoring in animal biotechnology. "(Firefighters) cut the top right off and took the roof away. They worked on her right away."

The two vehicles involved in the accident were not hauled away until after 10 a.m. Traffic on State Street did not return to normal until after 10:30 a.m.

LDS leaders limit travel

By MELISSA KIMBLE

Travel will be limited for general authorities of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints during the church's annual conference next month.

Area Presidencies and Authority Seventies throughout the world will not travel to Lake City for the biennial conference in April as they have traditionally done.

"The pattern will allow Presidencies to remain in their areas, and will solve problems caused by uncertainties," according to church news release.

According to the Associated Press, the church does not have leaders in Salt Lake City at the same time when the possibility with Iraq could make it difficult for leaders to return to service in foreign lands.

Keeping leaders in their areas will also allow leaders to further the extension of leadership training, which will utilize technology similar to that used in January for the church's first-ever global hood leadership broadcast.

BYU turns it on in second half

Araujo, Woodberry expressive as Cougars advance

BYU COUGARS

LAS VEGAS — BYU began its season in "Sin City" with a win over seeded New Mexico, 71-56, in the Thomas & Mack Center in hopes to advance to the second round of the Mountain West Conference men's basketball tournament.

It was all year that BYU is the team we've played," UNM coach Mitchie McKay said. "We got down on them. They were a very good team."

Rafael Araujo led the Cougars, collecting a double-double with 19 points and 13 rebounds.

Araujo matured as a player. About two or three months ago he would get down on himself. I'm real proud of his progress."

Steve Cleveland, UNM coach, said Araujo was a freshman when he was recruited. He was a good player, but he was not out of my rhythm."

on his shoulders," Cleveland said. "I am sure he's tired."

The game started off sloppy as both teams struggled to find their rhythm. The first basket for either team came two minutes into the game when Douglas took the shot that would give the Cougars a three-point edge at 7-4, five minutes into the half.

The Cougars continued to struggle to find their offensive rhythm in the half, as both their inside and outside game didn't work against the Lobos' tight defense, and they fell behind 11-6.

"I thought New Mexico came out with great purpose," Cleveland said.

Hansen came off a screen and hit a three from the top of the key moments later that got the Cougars back into the game, but their offense was just out-of-sync and didn't reach double figures until almost 12 minutes into the game.

The Cougars also struggled to keep league MVP Douglas from taking over offensively. He scored eight of the Lobos first 14 points.

Juniors Luiz Lemes and Jake Shoff then came into the game for the Cougars and were sparks off the bench contributing offensively and defensively.

Lemes kept Douglas from doing any damage the rest of the half while Shoff helped out underneath.

minute to go in the half and he saw the results quickly as Araujo was fouled underneath the basket and converted a three-point play resulting in the Cougars first lead of the game at 22-20.

A Cougar defensive stop gave BYU the opportunity to extend the lead before the halftime buzzer.

Junior Ricky Bower hit a three right in front of the Lobo bench to end the half.

BYU came out in the second half similar to the way they did to start the game, yielding a 10-6 run to the Lobos and holding on to a small one-point lead four minutes into the half.

The Cougars then gave up the lead, as Douglas scored his first two points since the 8:45 mark in the first half, giving the Lobos a 32-31 lead.

BYU didn't fold under pressure as they put together a 14-0 run that not only took the games momentum, but also gave the Cougars their biggest lead of the game at 45-32.

Junior Kevin Woodberry played well defensively, in one of his best games of the year, as he got the assignment to guard Douglas most of the second half.

"His ability to defend is a big plus for us," Cleveland said of Woodberry. "He's gotten much more comfortable."

The Lobos never recovered from the run, as Araujo and Woodberry were too much for UNM to handle.

Next up for the Cougars is the Colorado State Rams, who defeated the Wyoming Cowboys Thursday in another quarterfinal game.

Game time tonight is set for 7 and can be seen on KJZZ TV, channel 3 in Salt Lake City.

Cougars looking for revenge against Utes

By HILLARY WALLACE

LAS VEGAS — The BYU women's basketball team faces No.1 seed Utah in the Mountain West Conference tournament semifinals at 1 p.m. at the Thomas & Mack Center in hopes to avenge regular-season losses to the Utes.

The Cougars are motivated from the losses and determined to defend last year's tournament championship.

"You can't get more motivation than by losing to them twice and them being our arch rival, and plus the tournament," coach Jeff Judkins said.

BYU met Utah at the Marriott Center the same week coach Jeff Judkins dismissed senior forward Jennifer Leitner for violating team rules. As a result, the Cougars made major adjustments in their rotation to fill the gap.

Going into halftime, BYU gave up the lead on an 8-0 Utah run.

The Cougars never seemed to gain momentum in the second half as the Utes walked away with a 67-50 victory, the Cougars' only loss at the Marriott Center this year.

In the Utes' stadium, BYU battled back from a 20-point deficit in the first half and cut the lead to three, 67-64, by hitting 7-of-13 three pointers.

"I thought we did a pretty good job against them in Salt Lake," assistant coach Jonas Chatterton said. "We dug ourselves in a hole and had some turnovers."

A three-point attempt to tie the score fell short for BYU and an intentional foul gave the Utes two free throws to seal the 71-66 win.

Utah clinched the MWC regular-season title with the win and a No.1 seed in the tournament.

Sophomore forward Danielle Cheesman said BYU is ready to get revenge from the previous losses.

Senior guard Erin Thorn helped the Cougars in their 66-64 win over UNLV Wednesday by hitting the game winner and scoring a season-high 34 points. She said the team is excited to get another shot at Utah and is looking forward to putting a full 40-minute game together.

"We're ready," senior Erin Thorn said. "This is what we wanted to do. We wanted to meet them in this tournament to get a little revenge."

Judkins said BYU has problems matching up with Utah's Kim Smith because of her versatility as a guard who can post inside. Smith was awarded MWC Player of the Year and Newcomer of the Year as a freshman, and leads the Utes in scoring.

"Our threes aren't as big as she is and our fours aren't quick enough," Judkins said. "So she causes some problems."

When BYU met the Utes in Salt Lake, BYU freshman guard Jennie Overdiek played with a mask in the game after suffering a broken nose in practice during the week prior to the game. Overdiek, who will guard Smith, is now healthy and will be a key defender in Friday's game.

With motivation on their side, Thorn said the Cougars need to follow their game plan by running their motion offense and sticking on Utah's outside shooters and make it difficult for them to shoot.

BYU needs sweep against UC-Irvine

By STEPHEN VINCENT

The BYU men's volleyball team is trying to position itself for a NCAA tournament berth as it enters the final month of its season.

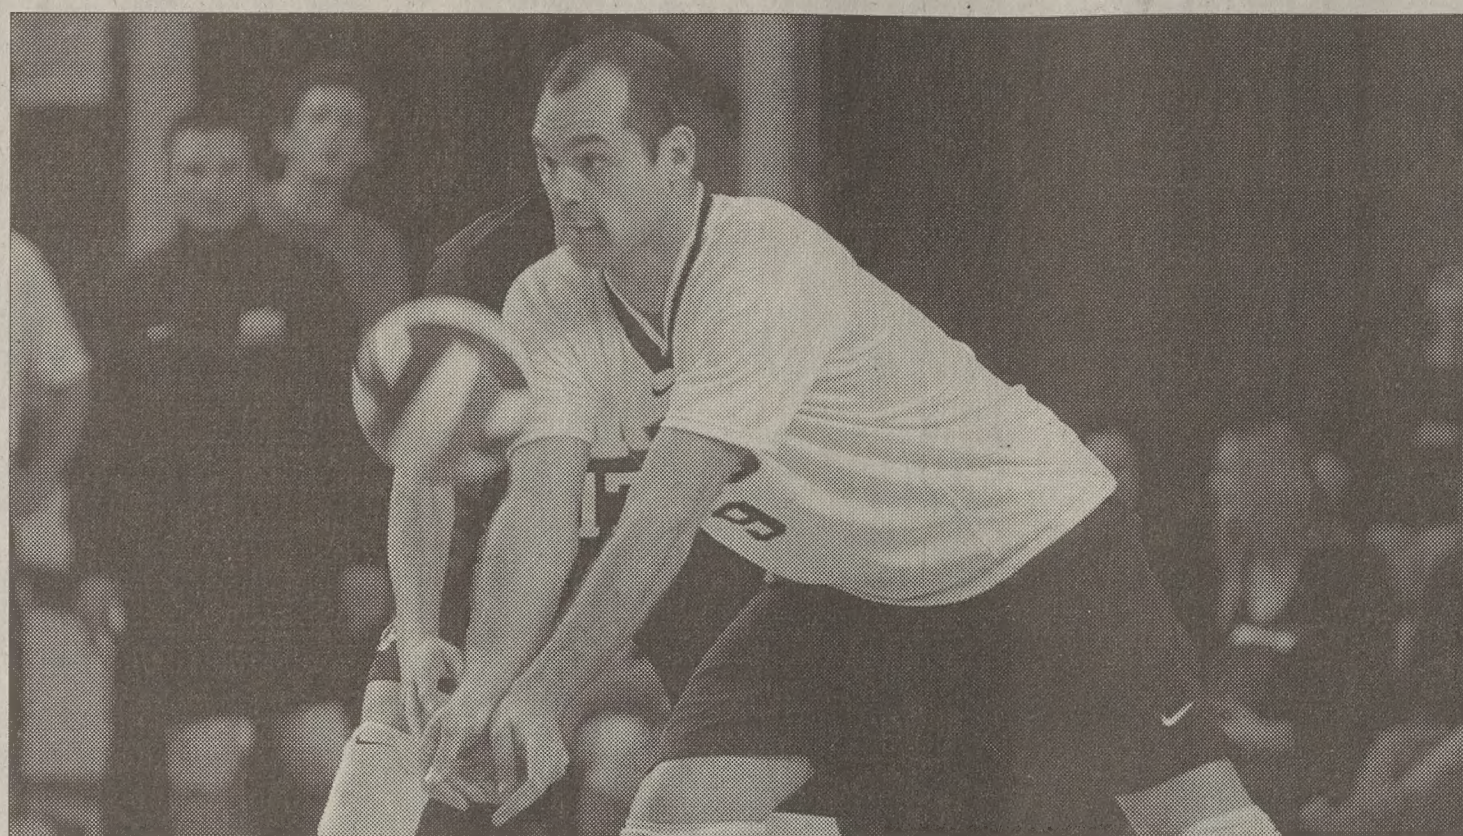

At the same time, BYU faces its toughest stretch of the season.

The stretch starts with home matches this weekend when the banged-up Cougars host UC Irvine at 7 tonight and Saturday in the Smith Fieldhouse.

BYU coach Tom Peterson said the matches will be critical because of seeding for the Mountain Pacific Sports Federation tournament and for the Cougars' chances of getting into the NCAA Tournament.

With No. 1 Pepperdine and No. 2 Hawaii in its conference, BYU will need to either win the conference tournament or have a convincing month that could lift it into the at-large bid.

"If you win the regular season (conference title) and make it to the semifinals of the conference tournament, then you're pretty much going to go to the tournament," Peterson said.

Peterson said his team still hopes to intercept the Mountain Pacific title from Pepperdine. To do so, the Cougars have to start with wins over UC Irvine.

"These matches are terribly important to us if we want to get to where we want to be," Peterson said.

No. 7 UC Irvine was ranked

No. 1 in the nation through mid-February when a loss to Cal State-Northridge knocked them out of the top spot.

The Anteaters (15-6, 8-6) star player is Jimmy Pelzel.

Cougars aware of Wolverines bite

By DAVID RUECKERT

This weekend provides BYU a chance to solidify their ranking in the USLIA, as they travel to Ann Arbor to face No. 6 Michigan tonight, and the University of Pittsburgh on Saturday.

After losing to No. 5 Arizona, the Cougars have to find success against the highly ranked opponents left on their schedule: Michigan, UCSB and Colorado State.

"It's an important game," coach Jason Lamb said. "We can't afford to have another big loss right now."

Another loss would push No. 4 BYU (4-1) lower in the top 10, which would match BYU against one of the nation's top four teams in the national quarterfinals instead of the semifinals. A quality win this weekend would give the Cougars a better position in the polls.

Michigan is 1-4 against BYU, their lone win coming in BYU's last trip to Ann Arbor in 2001.

Lamb said he feels about his team's preparation for the road trip. He said the weekend's loss helped the offense realize what it was capable of against top defense.

"Monday was the best practice that I've seen in years," Lamb said. "The word for offense, if we want to find success this year, is execution."

Michigan (3-3) has faced off against the teams in the USLIA, including Sonoma State, helping them learn from their mistakes and hone their strategy in the process.

Michigan coach John Lamb said his team will benefit from its California trip.

"Our team goals are around St. Louis," Peterson said. "The California trip is to help us in the long run."

Junior attackman Elston is the Wolverines' most able player.

Softball to play at home after 19 road games

By EVELYN BURNS

The BYU softball team will be playing for its home crowd for the first time this season over the weekend against Utah State.

The Cougars return from a tournament in California last weekend, splitting six games and losing to No. 1 UCLA and No. 13 DePaul. The Cougars go into their first home opener of the season 12-7, after spending their first 19 games on the road.

BYU junior All-American Oli Keohouhou leads the team in statistics this season with a .377 batting average, 20 hits, six home runs, 16 RBI and a .812 slugging percentage.

Senior Brooke Cadiente is not far behind Keohouhou, tallying five home runs and 14 runs scored this season.

"We've had a couple of decent days of practice this week because of the great weather," coach Gordon Eakin said. "We're not hitting as well this week, but we're still growing as a team."

The Cougars begin play against the Utah State Aggies today at 1 p.m. with a double-header and a single game on Saturday at 1 p.m.

The Aggies are 2-10 this season and went 12-44 last season. The Aggies are 22-15 in their all-time record against BYU, but have not beaten the Cougars in the last three years.

"The Utah State team is a much better team than their record," Eakin said. "They always come out aggressive and confident and play hard-fought games."

The Aggies return only seven of their players from last season, and have a young team with four freshmen starters.

Aggie Freshman Quela Henderson leads the team in hitting, going 7-17 in last week's tournament with a season batting average of .314.

The Cougars will also be looking to the pitching of freshman Leslie Higley, who pitched her first shutout on March 7 against New Mexico State University. Utah State won 5-0.

BYU sophomore Arron Layns and her teammates play their first home games of the season today and Saturday against Utah State.

"Coach [Debbie] Bilbao does a great job of getting them ready and motivated," Eakin said. "They'll be ready to play this weekend."

Distance runners lead Cougars

By LINDSEY JOHNSON and MICHAEL JACKLIN

A few lucky BYU tracksters will head to the University of Arkansas this weekend to compete at the 2002 NCAA Indoor National Track Championships in Fayetteville, Ark.

This will be the fourth-straight year the University of Arkansas will host the indoor nationals at the Randal Tyson Track Center, one of the best running facilities in the world.

"The fun thing about this meet is everybody has a chance to be an All-American," said men's track coach Mark Robison.

Last year, BYU women's track team finished in 16th place at the indoor nationals.

Senior Jamie Cottle will compete in the mile run with a BYU season best time of 4 minutes 43.67 seconds.

Ranked 11th in the 3,000-meter run, junior Michaela Mannova will compete with a BYU season best time of 9:16.79.

In the 5,000-meter run, seniors Lindsey Thomsen and Katie Martin (Sabey) will run in the 11th and 13th spots, respectively.

Thomsen has a BYU best time of 16:16.37 and Martin (Sabey) has the second-best BYU time of 16:18.13.

"She (Thomsen) was an All-American indoors last year," distance coach Patrick Shane said. "We expect her to continue that success again this year both indoors and outdoors."

The women's distance medley relay team who automatically qualified last weekend at the University of Washington will also run at nationals with a best team time of 11:17.64.

The relay team consists of sophomores Kassi Andersen and Jennifer Rockwell, senior Jamie Cottle and freshman Aneta Lemlesz.

Coach Robison said the Cougar with the best chance of winning in the men's events is sophomore Kip Kangogo. He is seeded fourth in the 3,000-meter run behind two runners from the University of Arkansas, Alistair Cragg and Daniel Lincoln, first and third respectively.

The three runners seeded ahead of Kangogo will run the 5,000-meter race Friday. Kangogo will not run the 5,000-meter race, giving him an extra day of rest.

"He has an excellent chance of doing well," Robison said. "It will come down to how he feels, and he has to be a little lucky and be in good position to not get tripped, or bumped, or whacked or those kind of things."

The U.S. Track Coaches Association recently named Kangogo the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Mountain Region Athlete of the Year.

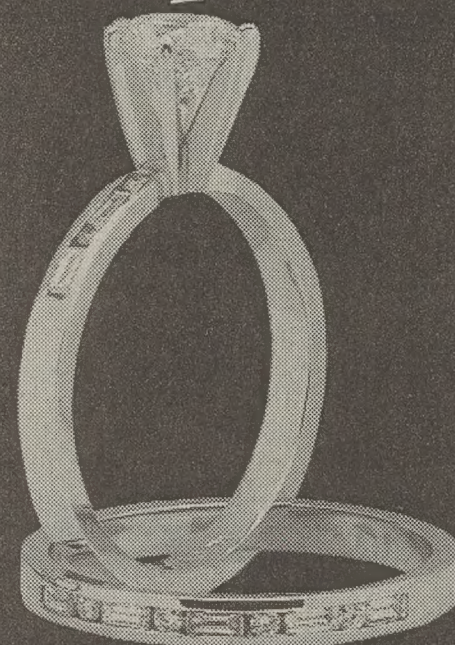

Sophomore Nathan Robison is seeded fourth in the mile, two seconds behind the top seed.

The preliminaries for the race will be Friday night and five athletes will be eliminated.

Senior Jeremy Kemp and junior Trent Powell, Cougar vaulters both seeded 11th, will also compete at the meet.

Friday's competition will start at noon (central time), and continue Saturday at 2 p.m.

Beavers invade Fieldhouse

STACIE SEARLE

Cougar gymnasts face Oregon State Beavers for the first time this season, Saturday at the Smith Fieldhouse. The two strong performers, who were joined by sophomore Lindsay Mabray for the third time this season.

"I think we're going to do real well," said junior gymnast Brooke Haskett. "Everybody has been putting everything into this week. We've been working pretty hard, so I think it will carry over to the Cougars will be competing without senior Brooke Haskett and junior Kari Lords.

Haskett tore her ACL during the 10 minutes of practice on March 6. She will be unable to compete this season.

Replacing Brooke has been a challenge because she was stable," assistant coach Shauna

Haskett sprained her ankle during the floor warm-up, just after she scored her first, and BYU's score of 10.0 on the beam at the four-way meet March 6.

"I think everybody is sad about a person who's injured, but I think it's kind of pushing us to work even harder," Haskett said. "We have to pick up the team going Haskett permanently injured temporarily forces the team to make lineup changes to see events.

Haskett and Lords are both strong performers on the bars, floor and beam. According to Haskett, the girls are working hard to get back to step up and fill in.

"I think they're trying to pick it up," Haskett said. "At this point in the season, it's more mental and they just want to win."

The team will be without Haskett and Lords, but Mabray will make her second appearance, having fractured her metatarsal last week after taking the all-around on Jan. 17.

Mabray made her return at the four-way meet last week. She competed on the vault, bars and beam. Mabray was expected to be BYU's top gymnast this season.

According to Mertz, Mabray is working hard to regain her strength. She said Mabray's fracture is completely healed.

"The key is getting our minds in the right place and getting up," Mertz said.

The Cougars will host the No. 10 Beavers who posted a season high 197.050, taking first place and placing first on all four events, including the all-around at the Shanico Days Inn-vitational March 7.

The Beavers also received a season-high 49.350 on the beam. They didn't have to count anything lower than a 9.800.

The No. 22 Cougars received their season-high 49.150 on beam at their first home meet of the season Jan. 25 against Boise State.

The Cougars are coming off of a second-place finish at last week's meet against Southern Utah University, Utah State and Central Michigan, scoring a 195.425 behind first-place Southern Utah's 195.875.

Professional atmosphere awaits Cougars

By DAN SINGER

A resurgent BYU men's tennis team heads to Palm Springs this weekend to face UC Santa Barbara.

The Cougars are coming off of a great win against the University of Denver where they got clutch wins from their lower-seeded players and, more importantly, from their doubles teams.

The team has struggled all season long with doubles play, though they have the 10th-ranked team in the nation in seniors Erik Nyman and Carlos Lozano.

Last Saturday's doubles win has boosted the Cougars' confidence.

"I expect we'll win the doubles point again this weekend," coach Jim Osborne said.

The Cougars will face a challenge against Santa Barbara. UCSB has beaten UC Irvine, a team that narrowly beat the Cougars earlier in the year.

"I don't know much about them (Santa Barbara), but I expect them to be a very scrappy team," Osborne said. "It should be a very close match."

Lozano and Nyman should help the Cougars in this weekend's match. Before last week's match, the tandem had not played in a month. Nyman played well, easily winning his singles match. Lozano struggled in his singles match, losing a tough three-set match.

"I think the difference in the match was energy," Lozano said last week.

Osborne believes that they have shaken off the cobwebs of their long break.

"I think they were rusty last week," Osborne said. "I think they will both play a lot better."

The Cougars will be playing in an exciting atmosphere. Palm Springs is hosting a professional tournament at the same location that BYU will be playing at.

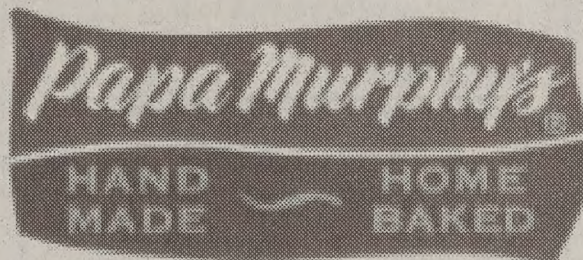

"It will be a great opportunity for our guys to see tennis at the next level," Osborne said. "There will be quite a few fans there to watch the action."

Rugby on road for first time

By BRETT HATCH

After a recent victory over UC, BYU rugby hopes to succeed against teams it has not in years, as it goes on the road for the first time this season.

BYU beat the University of Oregon, the first-place team in the conference, last weekend.

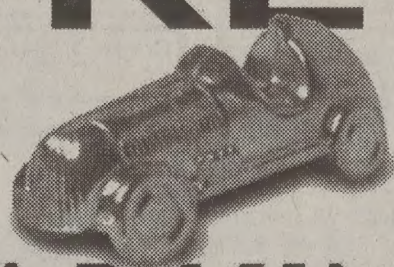

"We now go to California this weekend and we hope to take this win to us," team captain Pierre said. "I think if we can prepare the way we did for Utah, we will do well."

The Cougars travel to north California for a three-team tournament with St. Mary's College and the University of Nevada.

The Cougars beat St. Mary's 38-18 years ago in their last meeting. The Cougars say they will be able to play well against the Beavers, but that they don't know the teams' strengths and weaknesses.

The University of Nevada last came to BYU in 2001, when the Cougars handled the 32-18.

* STUDENTS * Protect Yourself! Investigate Before You Invest!

For your own protection closely examine any offers which promise or guarantee large amounts of income/ money.

Consider it a warning sign if you must buy something in order to start the program, or if you have to pay up front for the info.. Please request info regarding the fee on every interview. Readers should beware of scams, especially when requiring payment up front.

Work at home ads usually require money up front to receive the books to contact the companies or work-at-home ideas. The Better Business Bureau said that the companies they have researched, for work-at-home stuffing envelopes, or making $1000 to $5000/ month are NOT credible and you may lose money.

Be very careful NOT to give out any bank or Credit Card information unless you know the company well, or have checked them out thoroughly.

For a reliability report on a specific company, check first with your local Better Business Bureau. You will need the company's phone #.
